The second day of the races dawned clear and bright, with a cool breeze from the north, and the weather during the day was all that could have been desired. The attendance, though not large, was a great improvement over that of the first day, and promises to grow better as the meeting progresses. There is a large crowd in the city to-day, and as the programme this afternoon is of especial interest the assemblage will be, it is considered almost certain, greater than it was yesterday.

The first race was for a purse of $500. some large shipments of fruit cans to the First horse $250, second horse $125, third $75, fourth $50. Five horses were entered but only four started.
